A Fun Race

Part of the Elsa Medford

Book Collection

Once upon a time, in a small town, there was a boy and a girl. They were best friends and loved to play all day. The boy had a big toy car, and the girl had a cute little cat. They would often sit under the sun and make up fun stories with their toys.

One day, the boy said, "Let's have a race! My car can go fast, and your cat can run quick. Who do you think will win?" The girl looked at her cat and said, "I think my cat can win. She is very fast!"

They set up a race track in their backyard. The boy put his toy car at the starting line, and the girl let her cat sit next to it. They were ready for a fun race. The sun was shining bright, and it was a perfect day for a race.

The boy pushed his car, and it zoomed off. The cat saw the car and started running after it. They were both going so fast, it was hard to tell who was winning. The boy and the girl were cheering for their toys, having a great time.

In the end, the cat reached the finish line first. The girl was so happy. She picked up her cat and said, "You did it! You won!" The boy was not sad. He laughed and said, "That was fun! Your cat is really fast."

From that day on, they had many more races. Sometimes the car would win, and sometimes the cat would. But no matter who won, they always had fun. They learned that it was not about winning or losing, but about having a good time together. And that was the best part of their day.

The End